

Holiday snaps

BY JIM MURTY

■ GALICIA in north-west Spain is a splendid part of the world and, among its many claims to fame, it features a strong Gaelic tradition. The many Irish who have walked its Camino will testify to this after seeing the Tricolour alongside flags of the other Gaelic tribes adorning T-shirts in Santiago de Compostella. This pilgrim took a special interest in the Galicia team, sponsored by CaminoWays.com, who competed in this year's GAA World Games. Fierce competitors that they are, they battled hard and just missed out on the top prizes. But they made friends and, sure, we'll see them again on the Camino. Among CaminoWays.com's offers, Snaps was drawn to the five-night Finisterre Way – Santiago to Finisterre or Muxia (93km) self-guided tour from €545.
